AGRICULTURE:

Food Supply

Civilian food supplies during 1944 should be the same as last year, with farmers continuing record breaking performances, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said, but stocks of milk, cheese and fats may be slightly less.

At the end of 1943, the U. S. had the largest livestock inventory in history, Jones said, with 19 per cent more hogs and 3 per cent more cattle, although sheep and lamb numbers were down 4 per cent.

With farmers urged to cultivate 16,000,000 more acres than last year, they still face manpower problems, Jones related. The outlook for production of farm machinery and fertilizer have improved, he added.

Revealing $350,000,000 was spent for supporting farm prices in 1943, Jones said they served the double purpose of offering incentive for production and holding down consumer costs.

Postwar Outlook

Addressing the National Association of Mutual Insurance Companies in Chicago, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard declared postwar America's exportable surplus of farm commodities would be 15 per cent of production.

Assessing the figure resulted after estimating increased domestic demand for consumption and industry, Wickard said: "Again we are either going to have to extend credit or give agricultural products to other nations, or we are going to have to accept goods and services in exchange."

Advances in agricultural production will pose a major problem in postwar America, Wickard said, remarking that with only moderate demand and usual educational methods, yields will jump up 40 per cent in six years.

WAGES:

Peg Sticks

Testifying before the senate banking committee considering extension of rice control after June 30, War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis declared that the WLB intended to stand by its "Little Steel formula" limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over January 1943, levels, but only if living costs remain relatively stabilized.

To assure such stabilization, Davis recommended continuation of consumer subsidies. Prohibition of subsidies would result in appreciable rises in basic commodities and make present wages inadequate, Davis said.

Davis opposed suggestions that wages be limited, declaring such action would work against promotions and upgradings, and discourage state to industry.

WORLD RELIEF: Authorize UNRRA

By overwhelming vote, congress put itself on record for participating in world relief by authorizing expenditures of $1,350,000,000 for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to help the people of occupied countries get back on their feet following their liberation.

Although UNRRA will feed, clothe and restore essential services in the stricken countries, it will do so only for the purpose of getting the people started in rebuilding their agricultural and industrial economy.

Matching the U. S. contribution, 43 other United Nations will put about $850,000,000

PACIFIC:

Japs Invade India

While Adm. Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia command coped with a strong Jap drive into eastern Burma, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff concentrated on weakening the enemy's hold on New Guinea with heavy aerial attacks against shipping and gun positions.

Springing unnoticed from the jungle, a Jap force pressing far inland into India pointed at Imphal, key to the communications line feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Chinese-American troops opening a new supply route to China in northeast Burma. While the Allies maneuvered to weather this charge, two other Jap columns aimed at Imphal from the north.

In New Guinea, Allied planes ripped the northeastern coastal shipping route while Aussie and U. S. doughboys advanced northward toward the big base of Madang over craggy foothills.

EUROPE:

Take Over Balkans

Germany made her final preparations for an anticipated double-barreled attack against the continent by the Allies by integrating Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria into the Nazi war machine to provide a common pool of men and resources.

The Nazis' incorporation of the Balkans came as the Russ drew closer to the Hungarian border by stabilizing deeper into prewar Poland and surged onward to the Rumanian boundary by chewing off Germany's last grip in the Ukraine.

As Germany moved to utilize the Hungarian, Rumanian and Bulgarian armies of over a half million men and draw upon the agricultural and industrial resources of these countries, Nazi troops streamed eastward to take up the fight along the newly organized battlefront.

While the Germans moved quickly to mend their fences in the Balkans they more than had their hands full in Italy and the west.

Around Cassino Jerry clung stubbornly to his ground to block the bread highway to Rome, fighting desperately in the hilly country to dominate the heights from which he could pour his deadly artillery fire upon Allied troops maneuvering below.

In the west, the Allies sent fleets of bombers against Germany and Germany to rip defenses and railways over which troops and supplies could be shuttled and blast factories turning out Axis armament.

BIG BUSINESS:

Report Incomes

With war orders accounting for 66 per cent of the business, International Harvester had gross income of $448,035,941 and profit of $25,892,944 for its fiscal year ending October 31, 1943. For the 12 months ending July 1, 1945, the company has been authorized to use 20 per cent more for farm machinery.

Overcoming merchandising difficulties, America's No. 1 mail order house, Sears, Roebuck & Co., took in $852,596,706 and cleared $33,866,087 in 1943. Although shortages prevail, the quality of goods has improved in recent months, President Arthur S. Barrows said.

In reporting sales of $552,000,000 and profit of $7,403,000 in 1943, Wilson & Co. disclosed extensive developments in new meat preparations and packing, such as boneless beef and dehydrated corned beef, which should have wide markets after the war.

JAPAN:

Organize Workers

Again Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo told the Japanese parliament that the war situation was critical, but this time he underlined its gravity by calling for the establishment of military discipline in industry, under which an entire factory group could be punished for a single worker's offense.

Under Tojo's plan, workers would be organized under a system of military rank, with superior officers having the authority to punish employees from the boss down.

Heretofore conscripted for labor service for only four months of the year, all Japanese high school and college students will now be subject to such duty for any necessary periods.

TVA:

Under Fire

Tennessee's rank Sen. Kenneth McKellar took his battle against present TVA financial policies to the floor of the senate, demanding that the big one billion dollar government power project be compelled to operate altogether on direct appropriations from congress and turn over its revolving fund to the U. S. treasury.

Long at odds with TVA's Chairman David Lilienthal because of the latter's alleged political activities against him, Senator McKellar said congress should retain supervision over TVA funds to determine their proper expenditure.

Taking up the cudgels for TVA, Alabama's Sen. Lister Hill argued that acceptance of McKellar's proposal would mean congress would have to pass on all of TVA's technical operations, complicating procedure with possible paralysis of service.

SOUTH AMERICA:

Uruguayan Nationalists

With the election of pro-Allied ministers in the Uruguayan Cabinet of President Gen. Higinio Morínigo and ardent nationalists' seizure of control of that country, ultra-neutral Argentina's isolation in South American politics appeared at an ending.

Action of the Uruguayan nationalists was aimed at promoting closer relations with Argentina, which has resisted pressure to go to war against the Axis, insisting on its sovereign right to regulate its own foreign policy.

But like Chile and Bolivia which also have recognized the Argentine regime, Uruguay sought to remain on friendly terms with the U. S. as well, and leave no grounds for a break by any illegal changes in government.

RECONDITIONING:

Heal Quickly

To heal the wounded quickly and well and restore them to suitable military duty, the army has expanded its reconditioning program, utilizing education, occupation and recreation.

Point of the program is to prevent the patients from deteriorating mentally while recuperating physically, as is often the case even in civilian treatment, and to instill them with the knowledge that they are keeping pace with their buddies in convalescing.

Establishment of personnel reassignment centers at Camp Butler, N. C., Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and Camp White, Ore., assures the recovered soldier of placement in a position more suitable to his condition.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER

America's productive capacity for synthetic rubber is now so great that the United States can now hold its ground in dealing with British and Dutch organizations that controlled the East Indian plantations before the Jap invasion, William Jeffers, former U. S. rubber controller, declared.

Jeffers predicted that American tire manufacturers would eventually be able to turn out a synthetic rubber tire that would have all the endurance of the natural rubber.

The fight over subsidies—pardon me, I shouldn't use that word subsidies, the New Deal doesn't like it—the fight over "price premiums" on farm products is once more the chief concern of the administration and the members of congress who do not see eye to eye on this painful question.

The smoke of the battle over the veto of the subsidy bill included in the Commodity Credit Corporation bill has settled, and since then there was another veto (the tax bill) that didn't fare so well. Put the Farm Bloc members are not so overoptimistic as to believe that the President and congress are still far enough apart on the subsidy question that another veto could not be sustained. In the senate, the cooler heads of the opposition know this and are not willing to go through the same futile process again.

In the house, it is a different matter although this is not likely to change the final picture. House Leader Joe Martin, while conceding no jot or tittle to the administration that he can withhold, has made it plain that price control is necessary, and he isn't going to allow too much delay on the part of those who want an anti-subsidy rider attached to the OPA bill. He has other plans of his own.

War Food administration officials are quoted as admitting that the case of the bashful beef is one of their greatest problems. Concretely, they have the job of enticing two or three million head of beef cattle off the ranges and into the butcher shops during early spring and summer. And the only thing that they know of to make the cattle move is the good "old reliable" that makes the mare go—cash money. Since the administration is sitting on the coattails and refusing to allow prices to the consumer to go up, Uncle Sam will probably have to make up the difference again, if congress will let him, in the form of a "price premium" to the stockmen.

The Banker's Stake

And the government is wondering about something else besides a few meatless Mondays or Tuesdays or Wednesdays. It is worried about the banker who has a stake in steaks, as well as the cattleman and beef-eater.

Cattle on the ranges have increased beyond the feed on the ranges.

The average livestock population of America in the years 1922 to 1942 was 69 million head. Roughly let's say half of this was dairy cattle. Now the estimate is 82 million head and the ratio of eating cows to milking cows has increased alarmingly in the last few years.

And the beaver are now home on the range because there isn't a price incentive to lure them to slaughter. The government feared this; feared first the famine and then the flood. It now looks as if the famine was coming and the flood is not far behind. And this is where the banker comes knocking at the door. He remembers other gluts when the cattle to market at once, ruining the industry, making the banker's notes just so much wallpaper.

But how, the simple citizen asks, can there be a price drop when the government has placed a floor under prices as well as a ceiling over them? Well, see what happened to our friend, the hog.

The farmer brought his pigs to market. The government fixed the price which the packers were bound to pay. But so many pigs arrived that the packer couldn't pack them and the law didn't say he had to buy what he couldn't use. So the farmer, rather than pick up his pigs and carry them home again, sold them off at disastrously low prices to the smart boys.

Finally the smart boys got the floor price, the butcher got his ceiling price which the consumers with full pocketbooks and empty stomachs were glad to pay. All the farmer got was mad.

This happened why? The government says simply because some farmers, acting as how there was going to be such a good market for hogs, exceeded their quota—got too hoggy (one district in Iowa, I was told, increased its pig crop by 33 per cent, when the figure the government had set was 15 per cent). More about that later.

And so the War Food administration is afraid the same thing might happen to the cattle market. And the banker is afraid. It would be bad enough if we ran into a glut like the hog-jam but, as one WFA livestock expert put it, "we shudder to think what might happen if an early drought developed. There would be a great stampede to move cattle to market. Transportation and processing facilities might not be able to handle the movement. The result might be the loss of thousands and thousands of head of cattle."

R. M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve board for agriculture, who is a former agricultural adjustment administrator, is urging the bankers in the cattle industry to do their share in coaxing Ferdinand off the range.

About 'Elastic' Prices

Of course, the cattleman have been among the most violent critics of the price control administration and their representatives have maintained a steady battle here in Washington in an effort to remove the ceiling prices from beef (or, as they say, make the prices elastic) so that prices would rise and fall in accordance with the seasonal demand.

The cattleman's viewpoint as presented by Joe G. Montague of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association, boiled down his plaint to a simple statement.

"Cattle just provide the frames to hang beef on. The Lord knows we've produced the frames but somebody fell down on the job of hanging the beef on 'em."

Mr. Montague told me the other day that the weights have gone down faster than even he expected although he predicted the glut and the promised famine ever since the fixed price was made last October. They have gone off 27 to 28 pounds a head and he expects this will continue until July when grass feeding begins again.

"I'm trying to get the cattle off the ranches but I can't do it. The feed lots are not taking them because there isn't any feed. I could sell thousands of pounds of feed today if I could get my hands on it. The government reports show that there's a lot of feed somewhere but we can't find it."

Hoarded Corn

There is plenty of feed in the shape of corn in the country but the farmers with their government-assured prices on hogs are hoarding it—they are transforming it into pork. The government "asked for this" when it put a premium on hog-raising, as we have explained. But many farmers, poultry and dairy farmers and others outside the corn belt need feed.

Not only farmers but industrialists who need corn for their chemicals, are complaining. The army and navy who need their products have echoed their pleas.

So the government is smack up against the problem of prying this feed (corn) loose from the farmers who are keeping it to feed to their hogs. The only way they can shake the kernels loose is to increase the price of corn. The only way they can do that without breaking through price ceilings is to subsidize corn—in other words, buy it at a price which will make it more profitable to the farmer to sell it than to feed it to his hogs.

Montague's argument is that because the cattle business is seasonal you have to have flexibility in price. If the price is nailed down, the cattleman will sell his grass-fed cattle in September, instead of holding out for higher prices in the spring, and save going through the anguish of zero weather. Of course, under price control, the theory is that the flexibility is provided by the subsidy—excuse me again—by the government offering a price premium which gives the cattleman enough for a fair profit but doesn't increase the price to the consumer and start inflation. But the cattleman don't want price to rise and fall in the good old-fashioned way.

And that is where the issues in the fight over the proposed amendment to the OPA bill are neatly joined.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

MAKING fun of such a gruesome business as murder has made a fortune for Boris Karloff.

Four years ago Karloff suddenly realized that his homicidal hobbies weren't paying off as lucratively or as fast as he would like. After that spine-chilling Frankenstein monster, Le Mummy, a ghoul, Bluebeard, and other fiendish characters, he found himself demoted to lesser monstrosities in double-billed horror pictures.

Then along came an offer to appear in a New York play. He had never done one on the Broadway stage, and he, the terror of countless film fans, found the thought frightened him. Besides, it was a play that kidded insanity and murder—a very tough subject. But after settling for a nice, juicy piece of the play, plus a goodly salary, he lost his fear and took off.

Today, after three years of "Arsenic and Old Lace"—which is still packing them in New York and on the road—Karloff is back for more pictures.

He's sharing starring honors with Susanna Foster and Turhan Bey in Universal's technicolor musical drama "The Climax," which George Waggner is producing and directing.

"Launching a stage play is a big gamble," says Karloff. "But after reading the 'Arsenic' script it struck me as one of the finest plays written in recent years."

Karloff put $8,000 in the play and got that investment back in three weeks. He's still collecting fat dividends. Bankers should be so lucky these days.

Anything for Irene

Irene Dunne's cooling like a dove, and $200,000, might, since Metro paid $200,000 for

A. J. Cronin's latest, "The Green Years," from the galley sheets. Nothing is too good for Irene since "A Guy Named Joe" and "The White Cliffs" . . . Jennifer Jones, and not Gene Tierney, is going to play the lead in "Laura." That's the one Clifton Webb is wanted for, but whether he'll be able to do it nobody knows.

Margaret Sullivan leaves "Voice of the Turtle" June 24, but beginning June 19, she, Elliott Nugent, and Audrey Christy will give their services. The play will be shown free for a whole week to all men in uniform. That's a precedent I hope other producers will follow.

A Smile Maybe; Maybe Not

Ernst Lubitsch told me the following: While preparing "The Czarina" for the screen, he decided to get some authentic Russian names. He took a history book home with him. As he read he jotted down about 30 names from it such as Prince Ratofsky, Prince Petchekoff, and Count Borshky—then laid the paper on his bedside table. The following morning his man, who has been with him 15 years, came in, looked at the paper and said: "Mr. Lubitsch, if you expect to have that many people to dinner Saturday night, you'd better let me know right quick so I can round up food for 'em."

Bing's a Great Guy

Bing Crosby's just signed a new contract with Paramount—one of the most important deals ever put over in this town. It's for 10 years straight, 52 weeks a year, for 23 pictures, with permission to do one outside picture a year for another company—Bing to have final say over story, director, leading lady, songs and publisher of songs. There are few men in our town who could get a deal like this. It isn't everybody who would play fair. Bing bends over backwards to give as much as he gets. For instance, in "Road to Utopia," which I'm told is the funniest of all the "Road" pictures, it was Bing who gave Paramount a new director—Hal Walker. Until "Utopia" he had been an assistant. During the picture he had an accident, directed the last half of it from a wheel chair. In "Going My Way," a produced and directed by Leo McCarey, Curley Lindan, assistant cameraman up to then, was made a full-fledged one. It's the same with leading ladies. Through Bing, Marjorie Reynolds got her chance . . . He never has been afraid to boost the other fellow

Gypsy, as a chorus girl in dancing skirt and butterflys embroidered on her stockings, was dancing when Charley Winninger cracked: "Ah, me, spring is here." HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

GOLF BALLS: About 400 tons of balata, the tough gum used to cover golf balls, has been released by the War Production Board. It is showing signs of deterioration and is unsuitable for war purposes. Manufacturers of golf balls say that they do not have materials for centers on hand and not much for windings, so the balata does not mean any new balls in the immediate future.

HOWLING: Fewer perfect scores were bowled this season than for a good while back, the American Bowling Congress reports. In 1940 there were 284 perfect games in ABA sanctioned competition, the all-time high. In 1942 the score dropped to 223, and in 1943 it slumped to 127. This season there were only 84 perfect games, although 1,875 more teams were accredited.

Indian BEEF

by HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

W.N.U. RELEASE

LEW BURNETT has been engaged by TOM ARNOLD, owner of the Cross T, to act as trail boss on the drive from southern Texas to Opalala in the spring of 1945. Tom, with his son and daughter, STEVE and JOY, are moving to Wyoming. Tom must deliver 3,000 longhorns by September 1 or lose a profitable contract. Lew suspects that the Indian Supply Co. is trying to delay the Cross T so that their Open A herd can arrive first at Opalala. Lew enlists on the Red river. They hear gunfire, and the herd is stampeded. After a night of running, the herd is rounded up, but Tom Arnold has been thrown by his horse, and killed. CLAY MANNING tells Lew: "This will make a big difference."

CHAPTER X

"Let him bark," Quarternight said. "It'll take more than that." But Clay's meaning was clear enough. With Tom Arnold gone Joy and Steve would be the Cross T owners. And since Steve wore the pants he could take charge. Clay could put the idea into his head.

From the river bluff he saw the water had dropped a number of feet. It was still high, but the churning flood was gone. Long red sand bars were uncovered out in the middle.

No matter what happened, the longhorns had to go on. He made an immediate plan for that. Then he came back to the cook's wagon. Don't be seen if you can help it. Go on back ahead of me."

He pulled in and waited until Quarternight rode out of the trees with a canvas bundle under his arm. Only Steve was there when he went in, squatted at the fire pit, drinking coffee. His head turned at the sound of the horse. His cheeks that never took much tan were smooth and rosy and he seemed all at once, in this moment, too young for what was coming. "Lew," he said, "where's the others?"

"Up the creek, Steve. Joy here?"

"Asleep."

"Then come on with me." The thing he had to tell him made him quietly gentle. Even Steve's quick, "Say, I've ridden enough! Can't you let a man rest?" didn't change that. He said again gently, "Come on. This isn't work. Something's happened."

He saw the high color drain away and rush back. With no talk then Steve got up and walked to his horse. But out of the trees, looking straight ahead, he asked, "Dad?"

"Yes, Steve—Lew put out his hand. There had been years when he and this boy were like brothers, and Tom Arnold had been a father to them both. It seemed to him that now, if at any time, the unexplainable barrier between them ought to be down. His hand touched Steve's arm. It jerked from him as if he had struck a blow. He did not finish what he wanted to say. It was no use. Inside him a desolate loneliness feeling came crowding back.

He held deliberately to a slow walk up the creek, letting the river and most of their work done. There was no need for the boy to look at the trampled thing they had found. The grave on a little knoll close to the bank was already covered. They were mounding it over with rocks. Afterward, with that finished, they made a bareheaded circle waiting for someone who could talk.

Someone coughed and the little group moved. No one had spoken. That brief moment was gone.

"Clay," he said, "you go in now. Let Joy know. You and Steve."

He had seen Ed Splann stay off with the horses apart from the little group around the grave, and it seemed a kind of rank insult, the way the big man stood there casually rolling a cigarette, watching them and blowing out his gusty breaths of smoke.

As Steve and Clay got into their saddles and started toward camp Splann reached up for his own horn to follow them.

He called the man's name, walking toward him fast. Close, he said, "Not you. You stay here."

The heavy arm came down from the horn and hung loose. Splann turned himself around with a ponderous deliberation. "You talking to me?" His dusty fouled beard hid all expression. Then a quick hard mockery glittered in his pale eyes. "Maybe," he said, "I don't hear you any more. New owners make a new boss. You thought of that?"

He knew a certain end was coming, that he'd hold back so far on the trail. Quietly he said, "There'll be no change. There's something here you've missed." The urge toward the end he wanted drove him on. "If you can't take it like that you can ride out."

He saw the instant way the pale gray eyes sharpened. Splann's voice dropped, low and oddly droning. "So you figure it's that easy?"

"I've done my figuring," he said. "Here it is."

The big man was no lithe-headed amateur when a definite line came. He could see the cold defiance behind the drooping lids and the slack readiness that slid over the huge body. Then some thought moved the bearded lips in a half grin.

"All right," Splann turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle horn.

"All right," Splann turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle horn.

"All right," Splann turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle horn.

"All right," Splann turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle horn.

He understood this man's kind too well. He knew the move was false even as the arm rose and so was ready when that hand curved suddenly downward to the holstered gun.

His own holster flap was buckled. In that fraction of a second he wasted no time in trying to loosen it. He grabbed left-handed at the dull steel of Splann's rising weapon and threw all of his weight behind a blow of his right fist upward against the bearded jaw. It rocked the big head. But the man was solidly planted. He felt the gun's hammer rise in his palm and hooked his thumb around it. It snapped with no explosion and he hardly felt the metal's sharp cut in the flesh of his thumb. For the hatred dammed back in him so long had released something savage and cruel. He threw his fist again into a body blow. The gun came free into his hand with his thumb still blocking the hammer. He swung it, lashing across Splann's face. It half turned the man around and he brought the heavy weapon's barrel once more against the side of his head. That dropped him forward onto his knees.

Standing back, he was aware then of the others who had come running up. He heard Quarternight's voice: "What's he done?"

He answered without turning. "Splann's quit. He's through." He released the gun's hammer and shook away the blood. Behind him Jim Hook blurted out as high and

"We'll rest," he said, "beyond the river. We're going across as soon as we eat."

"Not if I know it!" Clay jerked his glance to the girl. "Joy, this is up to us. You don't have to go on."

"Clay!" She stared at him with a suddenly lost look. "What are you doing?"

"Joy," Lew said, "never mind. We're all of us on edge. It'll be all right." He moved to Clay's side and put his hand on his arm, his body covering the hard grip of his fingers. He turned Clay and walked him, the grip digging in. They were beyond her hearing when the arm jerked free.

He halted. "Clay, damn your soul." He could speak without anger now. His own life had been bitter and twisted enough at times so that he could know the hounding torment of another's mind. He had that understanding without knowing what was behind it. "This is plenty hard for her," he said. "You haven't made it any easier. What kind of a devil's driving you, Clay? I'll tell you one thing. You needn't hide so much maybe. Splann's quit."

"Quit?" Clay turned and was suddenly rigid and still. "You mean he pulled out himself?"

"Well, no," he said. "I fired him. We had a run-in. He waited, watching that desperate, driven look set across Clay's big face. 'Splann will go to the Open A. I know that. What does it mean?'"

There was no hot violence that he had expected in the answer. "It means," Clay said, "you've played hell." He swung his broad shoulders and walked away.

Lying there with the mid-afternoon sun bright upon its surface and the green grass stretching away beyond the north shore, the Red looked as inviting as a man could want. But a trail boss never could be sure. He had learned that himself in the way all men had learned it, by grief. Yet he felt that now was the one time to cross. A man shouldn't wait for the high water to drop to normal level. Flood had scourged the river to its hardpan bottom. Later, when the current slowed completely, the silt would pile up. That made your quicksand, the dreaded deathtrap for cattle.

Wheeling from the bank, he saw Clay in camp arguing with the men around him. But Quarternight was in there. Clay wouldn't get far with old Rebel John. Off on the flat the pooled longhorns had been down, resting. Moonlight Bailey and Jim Hope were grazing the horses apart from them about the creek.

He sailed a yell into camp and saw the men start toward him, all except Clay and Steve. And then, waiting for the riders to come out, and with that grin of Clay's growing rebellion so clear, his mind went to a thing he had not thought of before. Tom Arnold had said for him to look in an old account book that Joy's wagon carried if anything happened. A moment's speculation held him, but after a while in the rush of work he did not think of it again.

Riding on toward the horse herd, he could see the dead-trail business of his crew. Yet there was no complaint and there would be none. "We'll get across and camp early," he promised.

The horses had no fear of him. Under pressure of the riders strung out behind them they moved to the water and plunged in, leaving muddy seepers higher than their heads.

He pulled off on the bank and watched them closely, seeing the flood touch their bellies but none farther than that. It was safe enough, he thought, to cross the wagon.

When his wave brought them out of camp he saw Clay on the bank with Joy, driving for her. His big shape stiff and set. Without a word for help he turned down the slippery bank.

There was another reason also he had for moving now. Times like this work was better than anything else. He didn't want Joy, or the men either, with an idleness to go back over what had happened. Now the shock still held them in a numb way. Throwing themselves into the job of crossing would ease the bad hours that were bound to come.

Joy stood at the end of her wagon, both arms rigidly down at her sides. Clay had just stepped back from her. He didn't locate Steve.

She drew her head up and raised her eyes to Clay's. "I'm all right." He seemed to look far down in them, and see all of this girl's quiet courage and something else in their steady gaze, unreadable to him.

Then Clay was at his side. His hand took her arm. "Honey, you'd better rest." His blue eyes turned with a hot stare. "That goes for the whole camp, I figure. Any objections, Lew?"

He saw where Clay was leading. The challenge was thinly veiled. And that a man even with Clay's surly temper should force any issue now showed him how unexplainably bitter the reasons must be.

"We'll rest," he said, "beyond the river. We're going across as soon as we eat."

"Not if I know it!" Clay jerked his glance to the girl. "Joy, this is up to us. You don't have to go on."

Now the shock still held them in a numb way. Throwing themselves into the job of crossing would ease the bad hours that were bound to come.

Joy stood at the end of her wagon, both arms rigidly down at her sides. Clay had just stepped back from her. He didn't locate Steve.

She drew her head up and raised her eyes to Clay's. "I'm all right." He seemed to look far down in them, and see all of this girl's quiet courage and something else in their steady gaze, unreadable to him.

Then Clay was at his side. His hand took her arm. "Honey, you'd better rest." His blue eyes turned with a hot stare. "That goes for the whole camp, I figure. Any objections, Lew?"

He saw where Clay was leading. The challenge was thinly veiled. And that a man even with Clay's surly temper should force any issue now showed him how unexplainably bitter the reasons must be.

"We'll rest," he said, "beyond the river. We're going across as soon as we eat."

"Not if I know it!" Clay jerked his glance to the girl. "Joy, this is up to us. You don't have to go on."

"Clay!" She stared at him with a suddenly lost look. "What are you doing?"

"Joy," Lew said, "never mind. We're all of us on edge. It'll be all right." He moved to Clay's side and put his hand on his arm, his body covering the hard grip of his fingers. He turned Clay and walked him, the grip digging in. They were beyond her hearing when the arm jerked free.

He halted. "Clay, damn your soul." He could speak without anger now. His own life had been bitter and twisted enough at times so that he could know the hounding torment of another's mind. He had that understanding without knowing what was behind it. "This is plenty hard for her," he said. "You haven't made it any easier. What kind of a devil's driving you, Clay? I'll tell you one thing. You needn't hide so much maybe. Splann's quit."

"Quit?" Clay turned and was suddenly rigid and still. "You mean he pulled out himself?"

"Well, no," he said. "I fired him. We had a run-in. He waited, watching that desperate, driven look set across Clay's big face. 'Splann will go to the Open A. I know that. What does it mean?'"

WORN LINOLEUM

Question: When linoleum that is pasted down becomes damaged at seams or worn places, can the damaged areas be taken out and other pieces put in? There are a few bumps in the floor covering that are hard. Can these be taken out? What is the usual weight of a roller used on linoleum?

Answer: Damaged areas in linoleum can be cut out and new pieces put in place. The cutting should be done with a very sharp linoleum knife, which has a hooked blade. The bumps in the floor covering evidently are caused by irregularity in the flooring boards; to remove them the linoleum will have to be taken up and the wood floor made smooth. A 75-pound roller generally is used for light gauge linoleums, and a 100-pound roller on the heavy or thick linoleums.

UNPAINTED WINDOW SASH

Question: I have new window sash and frames. I have noticed that the painter did not paint the bottom of the inner sash nor the top of the outer sash. I have likewise noted that there is no paint on the parts of both of the slides in which the sash rests when they are in a normal closed position. I hesitate to use ordinary paint, since this will no doubt make the windows stick. What treatment would you recommend to prevent the wood from absorbing moisture, which would later cause cracking and rotting?

Answer: Melted paraffin rubbed well into the raw wood should protect the surfaces, and when rubbed into the slides, will prevent sticking. You can also get a special preparation for this purpose at hardware and dime stores.

Mildew in Basement

Question: I occupy a basement flat which is none too dry. Mildew appears on the rug in my bedroom. The floor is made of cement, with a wooden floor on top, insulated with one sheet of felt paper. Over this is linoleum, a pad and rug. What can I do to prevent this mildew?

Answer: The concrete floor probably was laid without sufficient damp-proofing. The best thing to do would be to mop on a coating of liquid asphalt. Over this put down a layer of heavy saturated felt, with the sheets overlapped half their width and a mopping of asphalt placed between the laps. Then put down a wood flooring with a mastic cement.

Defective Radiator Valves

Question: All of my radiators have variable part air valves with adjustments made according to distance from the boiler. I get plenty of heat on the first floor, but the burner shuts off too soon to heat the upstairs radiators. Can you suggest anything which might be helpful?

Answer: The quick test valves on the mains in the basement may be dirty or defective. Changing or replacing the valves may help exhaust air from the pipes faster, resulting in quicker heating of distant radiators.

Loose Floor Tiles

Question: Can you tell me how I can secure pieces of tile in a floor? Two or three pieces loose at a time. The job is too small for a contractor.

Answer: Some tile dealers sell a compound that could be used for the reetting of tiles. If you cannot get it, try reetting the tile with a mixture of powdered litharge and a little glycerine. The glycerine may be hard to get. Spread that on the back of the tile and put in place as soon as possible. The mixture sets quickly.

Yeast in a Septic Tank

Question: In regard to the item about the use of yeast in a septic tank—could you give us more information regarding the purpose of this?

Answer: The reason for the occasional use of yeast is to start bacterial action in a septic tank or to accelerate it.

Household Hints

To avoid shine on much-worn trousers and skirt seats brush the garments after each wearing.

Hang a full-length mirror in the kitchen and small children can see for themselves whether they have clean faces and combed hair. It also serves as a daily reminder of one's own appearance.

Shoes are rationed, buckles aren't. What's the answer? Select plain black pumps that may be worn with or without fancy detachable buckles. Several pairs of buckles equal several pairs of shoes—in appearance at least.

Cotton blankets should be washed singly in lukewarm water and enough mild soap to make a two-inch standing suds. Rinse in several lukewarm waters. Dry in shade.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Seriousness of the truck tire shortage will be appreciated when it is known that 34 of the country's largest cities receive all their milk by motor trucks.

Underinflation is a voracious waster of tire rubber. A check on Michigan war workers' cars recently showed that more than 15 per cent were underinflated.

Rubber and processing represent about 40 per cent of the cost of manufacturing a popular size automobile tire.

The first rubber-tired motor bus was operated in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 19

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Home, family, work, gardens, books, the love of children. These are God's law for us.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

EASTER has one element that makes it different from all the other great days of the year.

It is the day on which we ought to remember that sorrow can change to joy, doubt can change to faith, fear can change to hope. Even more than Christmas, or any other feast, this is the day that takes into account all human pain and sin and darkness, and irradiates even the bleakest life with miraculous promise.

The apostles were desolate, when the first Easter dawned. They had believed that they had found a Messiah, as their scriptures had promised, and that Messiah had been spit upon, laughed at, tortured, killed as a common liar and blasphemer. But more than any mere religious disillusionment and dismay, I think, must have been their bitter heartache of loneliness. He had walked with them, shared food with them, opened to their simple minds and hearts new thoughts so beautiful, so inspiring that their whole lives were changed.

And now, suddenly, he was gone. Gone in an agony of pain and shame; despised, soon to be forgotten except by their broken hearts. They had been seeing him every day, making all their plans to fit those of the new friend, thrilled with expectation of what new marvels he would do today, what he would say. Now they could not find him.

Death Wiped Out All Hope. All blankness. Like the crash of a thunderbolt the end had come; the authorities had accused him of treason, and with a fearful swiftness had wiped out all that friendliness, all that gentleness, all that hope.

During the Saturday after his death how dull the boats and the nets, the walks and the quiet, frightened talks together must have been! Nobody safe, nothing as it had been. Better far to forget him and his teaching. Only—they couldn't forget him.

One wonders what these simple folks would have thought if some voice from an undiscovered continent thousands of miles away, after 2000 years had passed, had said to them "yes, and he never will be forgotten. Dead through all the ages his name and his strange doctrine of humility and forgiveness will go on, and even though nations and men have and the courage always to obey the law he taught, they will remember it. They will return to it over and over again."

So it is what we have to remember this Easter. Not that fearful things are going on in this world, but that back of them all is the old warfare between the law of evil and the law of God.

Good Shall Prevail.

Under this surface of horror lies the determination, strong in millions of hearts, that good shall prevail, peace, safety, the right to enjoy the good simple things of life. Home, family, work, gardens, books, the love of children. These are God's law for us, and these must not be destroyed. A thousand million men and women are enlisted in the great struggle whose object is that all men shall be free to serve God and serve

"The sublime courage of our boys."

THE INSPIRATION OF EASTER

Amid the horror and cynicism of this global conflict, the glory of another Easter shines forth, radiating the only true hope of mankind for a lasting peace. The yearning in the hearts of millions of simple, kindly people for a chance to live their lives in tranquility, is more poignant than ever this year, yet prospects of a new and happier life are better than they have been for many years.

The conviction that the good shall prevail is having a rebirth all over the world. The ideals of freedom and justice are as bright this Easter as they ever were. It is in this faith and hope that we all bend to our wartime tasks to speed the day when peace will return to a tortured earth.

their fellow men. And after this war is won we will see those ideals being demonstrated as they never have been since the beginning of the world.

We see the beginnings of them now. In the sublime courage of our boys, their readiness to give their lives that other lives shall be more safe; in the miracles of science that can lessen pain and defeat death itself, in the tons of food and clothes, blankets and medicines that crowd the ocean lanes with supply ships; in the eager workers in Red Cross headquarters, canteens, charities, hospitals, scout drives, community chest drives, bond drives. There is no woman worthy of the name of American who has not her share, small or great, in the colossal work of establishing peace and justice on the earth.

The miracle that could change the bewildered despair of the disciples' hearts into a very ecstasy of joy and hope, can happen again. It will take place when we grasp the true meaning of Easter. This has been exquisitely said in the lines I am quoting. They were sent me as a magazine appeared anonymously in a magazine called "The Poet." Does anyone know who wrote them?

Whenever there is silence around me

By day or by night—

I am startled by a cry

It came from the cross

The first time I heard it,

I went out and searched,

And found a man in the throes of crucifixion

And I said, "I will take you

down"

And I tried to take the nails out of his feet.

But he said, "Let them be,

For I cannot be taken down.

Until every man, every woman,

every child

Come together to take me

down"

And I said, "But they cannot hear you cry.

What can I do?" And he said,

"Go about the world

Tell everyone that you meet

"There is a man on the cross."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Daily Menus Need Changes to Fit Family's Wants

You'll be surprised at how little chicken is needed for Chicken Noodle Paprika, but how good the casserole can taste. It meets all the requirements for a good, wartime dish.

Do you plan your meals to suit the family's mood?

In spring, for instance, do you satisfy their hunger for foods crisp, crunchy and light? Do you get away from the too hearty and heavy foods of winter and heed the change in weather and appetite? If you don't, then you should! Every family requires a change in food as well as in dress.

Food is more fun for both you and the family if you vary menus from time to time, weed out much-repeated recipes and add new ones to the family's collections. Do keep in mind the changes of season and their wealth of new foods and color schemes to add interest to the diet.

Vegetables herald the important coming of spring—and their use in meals should be more generous, even in the meat course itself where they will act as a meat extender.

Motives: Produce and preserve, share and play fair are motives which should be in every household notebook.

This is what I mean, so check yourself on the following points so that you can tell if you're doing the job on the home front.

Save cans—to meet the quota of 400,000 used cans every month.

Save waste paper and collect scrap Containers are made from these to ship supplies to forces overseas.

Start the Victory Garden early—to produce more food than we did last year.

Store leftover food correctly, prevent waste.

Shop early in the day, early in the week. Accept no goods without stamps.

Substitute for scarce foods, serve simpler meals to save time and leave you more time for vital war work.

*Chicken Noodle Paprika.

(Serves 6 to 8)

- 1/2 pound medium-cut egg noodles
- 4 cups boiling water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup diced carrots
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/2 cup onion, cut fine
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 1 1/2 cups chicken stock or gravy
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 cup minced, cooked chicken

To the boiling water add salt and egg noodles. Cook until all water is absorbed and noodles are tender. This requires about 10 minutes. Stir frequently during cooking period. Combine carrots, celery, onion and shortening and cook for a few minutes. Add chicken stock, paprika, seasonings and chicken. Cook slowly until vegetables are tender. Pour this mixture over the cooked egg noodles, place in buttered casserole and bake 1/2 hour at 350 degrees. Whole pieces of chicken may be used in place of the minced chicken.

An inexpensive food is the salad, but it provides the mineral and vitamin riches necessary to good health and living, and satisfies the need for change of texture and contrast in menus.

Picture Industry Donates Films to Army and Navy

Combat-weary Yanks, relieved from front-line duty by replacements and sent to the rear to rest, turn to movies as a means of escape from the mad business of battle, according to letters received in towns throughout the country by relatives and friends of boys now in foreign service.

These letters complained at first that the pictures were old, but recent correspondence ends complaints and indicates that conditions are improving.

New Hollywood productions fresh from the studios are shipped to all theaters of war by the Army Overseas Motion Picture service and are shown somewhere every night in every combat zone occupied by American troops.

Protected by top priorities, these film programs, printed in the 16-mm. size and known as "Films for Fighting Men" are a gift from the motion picture industry which began in February, 1942, with the presentation of 80 prints from four different pictures. Since then these free films have gradually increased until now a total of 180 pictures are issued each week, divided into 63 prints each of three different programs. Each program includes a full-length feature and at least one short subject. To date the grand total of 11,782 programs has been sent overseas.

These programs of new films are shown only to uniformed members of the armed forces in combat zones, and to sick and wounded in overseas hospitals, and to men on isolated outposts where other film entertainment cannot be had.

When troops are en route to battlefronts on transports, they are shown specially selected 16-mm. film versions of "Hits of the Past." This avoids duplicate showings of new films, so servicemen do not see the same pictures twice.

Musical Shows Favorites. Every feature-length picture and every short subject made by the major studios in Hollywood is included in this service, offered to our armed forces through a selection board in New York City composed of army and civilian personnel. This board is guided in its choice by expressions from soldier audiences in the various theaters of war. Opinions polled to date show that servicemen's tastes lean toward musicals, comedies and light drama. War pictures are last on their list, while features and shorts which bring views of the good old U. S. A. are always welcome.

Upon reaching the various war theaters, these 16-mm. films—less than half the size of those seen in your local theater—are sent to the various combat zones through 10 film exchanges maintained by the Army Overseas Motion Picture service. Handled in this reduced size, they are easy to ship and can be exhibited on portable equipment readily transported in active regions.

The showing of these pictures is always subject, of course, to the hazards of war. Usually they are displayed to battle-weary troops in rear areas behind the front. The object, however, is to get them as near the fighting line as possible. In some instances they have been shown so close to the line of battle that prisoners subsequently captured said they heard the sound track.

Although planned originally for the army only, recent arrangements made through the war department have thrown these showings open to all combat troops, regardless of their branch of service. This includes the navy, marine corps, the coast guard when their own films are not available in active areas; also members of Allied armed forces operating in these zones. Both the Red Cross and USO are authorized as agents to show these 16-mm. pictures.

Movies in Training Camps. The motion picture industry's 16-mm. gift films should not be confused, however, with the 35-mm. showings of the Army Motion Picture service, and a similar system maintained by the navy.

Through a commercial arrangement with motion picture distributors made 20 years ago, both the army and the navy rent for their own use 35-mm. prints of motion pictures which play the commercial movie houses. These films, obtained at low rental, are now shown on a nonprofit basis by the army in all training camp theaters in this country, and at established army post theaters in all territorial possessions.

Army men in the South Pacific watch a movie in an open air theater. Their faces reflect varied reactions. Soldiers often see three or more pictures a week.

sions. The average admission is 14 cents, and any profit derived therefrom goes toward expanding the service.

Ever since the declaration of war, as a special favor to servicemen, pictures playing the army circuit have, as a rule, preceded showings in commercial theaters except where these showings conflicted with exhibition contracts of movie theaters near the camps. Servicemen unfamiliar with required trade practices, complain at times because they see pictures in these commercial theaters before the camp movie houses show them.

The navy does not experience this difficulty because, generally speaking, its pictures are shown free on shipboard or, in some instances, for a small admission at naval stations, the profits going toward improving and expanding the service.

Old Films Shown at First. When the conflict broke suddenly after Pearl Harbor, we were just as unprepared for maintaining a worldwide entertainment program as we were for global combat. The first expeditionary forces that left for the South Pacific took along 1,000 old 16-mm. pictures purchased in the open market, which were the only films of that size available at the time. Later, when the African expedition sailed, a similar war department purchase was made. And further complications were added through the indiscriminate buying of old films and portable equipment by embarking troop units as large as battalions, all striving to meet an entertainment emergency.

Although the army has been able to recall all but 306 of these old films, those still in circulation despite efforts to recover them, combined with the unauthorized 16-mm. films remaining overseas, add up to a sizeable headache. Servicemen who still sit through these old programs complain loudly.

Another source of complaint lies in the wartime dislocation abroad of the commercial motion picture industry. In such battle-blasted areas as Sicily, films as ancient as Tin-Tin are often featured in local theaters for outrageous admission prices. But this is no strange consideration that Macbeth barred American films in Italy in 1933. No new pictures have been shipped into Italian territory since, excepting those supplied through the motion picture industry's gift service. The 16-mm. gift films, however, are now going overseas at the rate of 150 prints of three new programs each week. New combat zone circuits are being added rapidly and projection facilities are improving and increasing. This means that film shows in all theaters of war, barring the inevitable disruptions and annoyances occasioned by battle action, are bound to achieve a state of diminishing complaints and rising perfection.

In a report to Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the army service forces, covering a 30,000-mile tour of the Pacific theater, Maj. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, U. S. army, director of the morale services division, army service forces, said that motion pictures have proved an effective antidote to the tension and physical strain of battle, and that they are particularly welcome to men just returned from the front.

His tour, which included "the largest motion picture circuit in history," maintained by the overseas motion picture service of army service forces in the Pacific, proved to him, he said, that "the Pacific soldier is the most avid movie-goer in the world."

The distribution of first-run films to the various fronts by air is on a par with any similar commercial operation, the general pointed out, and came about "because combat officers want their men to relax after they come out of the lines. The movie has proved to be the solution.

Army men in the South Pacific watch a movie in an open air theater. Their faces reflect varied reactions. Soldiers often see three or more pictures a week.

A screen against a jungle backdrop brings the soldier close to home again.

The army service forces have arranged to distribute films in rotation to the combat areas of the Pacific, after which they are routed to supporting units farther to the rear. In this way, troops in actual combat are the first to be shown the latest of Hollywood's screen offerings. Also given high priority for early showings are the wounded in hospitals.

Movies Take Him Home.

The soldier wants to see pictorial views of streets that remind him of his home town, of people he might meet on those streets; of women to remind him of his mother, his wife; his sweetheart; of ordinary happenings in which he will again participate.

"This tremendous movie chain's value as a good will factor is beyond computation. In New Guinea, for example, where Australian and American soldiers fight side by side, they sit down to see an American film side by side. Our troops visit Australian camps where the screen fare is predominantly American."

Newsreels, comedies, and musical pictures are high on the G. I. hit list. "Soldiers dislike war pictures with glorified heroes," General Osborn said.

"They like to see informational films, those that explain war strategy and show real battle scenes. The soldier is anxious to see what his weapons can do. The army's 'Why We Fight' series has immeasurably bettered his understanding of issues at stake. 'Snafu,' the cinema comic of the Army-Navy Screen Magazine, is a Pacific favorite."

General Osborn included Australia, New Guinea, New Zealand, New Caledonia, Solomon Islands, New Hebrides, New Georgia, Bougainville, and Fiji in his 30,000-mile survey of the Pacific theater.

"I have seen tropical theaters seating 3,000 soldiers on wooden benches, and 1,000 sitting on crates and logs and oil tins in an outdoor excavation," he said.

"Soldiers frequently sit in tropical downpours for one and two hours before showtime to enjoy a run-of-the-mill film made 'silent' when the sound track breaks down, and then return the next night to see it again."

"During alarms the men quietly leave the theater and as quickly resume their seats afterward to see the rest of the movie. While excavations were under way on a New Guinea base, a bulldozer was assigned the priority detail of hollowing out the ground for an open-air amphitheater."

"I have seen men watch a picture from such a distance that the screen was the size of a postage stamp, and I have heard men gripe at a poor show but sit through it to the end. With several pictures playing on various bases on an island, men were known to walk nightly many miles around the entire island until they had seen all the pictures."

Entertainment reels from 19 army overseas film exchanges are transported by plane, boat, jeep, or hand-carried to the camp sites. Mobile special services companies with portable equipment and camera crews tour remote areas playing one-night stands.

"Today some soldier in a water-logged foxhole, sitting atop a gasoline drum to keep his feet dry, is seeing a picture perhaps just premiered by you in the plush seats of Radio City, New York," General Osborn commented.

Bright before him shone Chi-Caw-Go. Level spread the boom before him; From it leaped the nomination, Sparkling, flashing in the sunlight, Looking fair again and tempting

Even after what he'd been through. Toward the sun his hands were lifted Both the palms spread out against it, And between the parted fingers Fell the sunshine on his features, Something in the mist of morning

Loomed and lifted from the water, Now seemed floating, now seemed flying

Coming nearer, nearer, nearer. Was it Brick-er, the self-made one, Or the Bob-Taft from Ohio? Or the great Shu-Shu-Shu-Tom-Tom The crusading one called Catch-Em, The famed warrior on rackets, Baritone from far Owosso Known to all the tribes as Dew-Eh? None of these! But delegations, Delegations from the prairies, Delegations from the cities, Come by birch canoe with paddles, Trying out their vocal organs.

And the mighty Flying Eagle, With his hands aloft extended, Waived full of exultation, Saying in his best make manner: "Beautiful the sun, oh palsies, Bright the prospects are, oh wailies."

"Never bloomed the chance so brightly, Never shone the outlook better!" And the delegates made answer: "Not so fast, best-seller chieftein, 'Take it easy, global airman, 'We admit your deeds of valor 'But as yet 'tis early Springtime; 'Gentle June is still far distant, 'Anything is apt to happen, 'Keep your shirt on, keep your shirt on!"

And the Brick-er and the Dew-Eh From their haunts among the fendlands Screamed "Farewell, oh, Wen-Del-Will-Kie; 'We're your buddies, we're your tribesmen, 'But the battle is the pay-off!"

And the Wen-Del-Will-Kie answered, "How I wonder, how I wonder!"

AMERICAN DIALOGUES
"There's a fortune in it for you."

"Now look here, if you expect to get anywhere with this proposition, don't depress me."

Louis Schwartz, a New York gargon known as "Louie the Waiter" has personally sold four million dollars' worth of war bonds, a record to be proud of. It occurs to us that possibly he took to selling bonds because they are the only thing a customer could ask for and get.

We can't help wondering if Mr. Schwartz, when a customer says, "I'll take a bond, medium-well," replies, "but remember no butter."

The war department has ruled that dogs in the war may be elited but not decorated. Fido would rather have a bone, anyhow. How about a Distinguished Service Knuckle With Meat Attached?

A senator has introduced a bill asking for an investigation into the matter of why shirttails are getting shorter and shorter. It could be merely a matter of suspenders getting weaker and weaker.

If Japan intends to remove admirals and generals every time Uncle Sam kicks her in the pants she will soon be running her war entirely through first sergeants and corporals.

Two big hosiery manufacturers have been fined $40,000 for ignoring OPA ceilings. It can't be said they didn't have a leg to stand on.

Wanna Del? "However much the storm may rage around our fortress, the day will come when from behind the dark clouds the sun will shine and smile on us."—Adolf Hitler. In a recent address to the German people.

As a weather prophet Hitler is going to prove a terrible bust, too.

Ima Dodo says she can't see why the gum makers don't adopt that new song "Chew, Chew, Baby" as a radio theme song.

Roses Stenciled on Old Furniture, Etc.

Your old household furniture and shabby odds and ends may blossom with roses. Here, an old rocker of no particular period was painted blue and then stenciled in the Boston rocker manner. The streaked old window shade and an old tin tray were also painted blue and then stenciled with pink roses. A vine design of pink rambling roses was stenciled on the cream colored walls around the windows.

The lamp base shown in the sketch was made from an old milk can. This can as well as an old paper parchment lamp shade, a chest of drawers and a footstool were painted cream color and then stenciled with smaller roses.

NOTE: These rose patterns so designed that they may be used for stencils or may be traced and painted freehand according to colors and directions are available by mail at 15 cents. Large, small and medium size roses as well as the chair back design and vine are contained on Pattern No. 250. Address:
